Description

Advanced study and practice of argumentative writing with emphasis on critical analysis and evaluation of texts. Focus is on reading and writing assignments from across the disciplines to refine critical reading, writing, and thinking skills. The honors section is intensive in content, involving both writing and meta-analysis of complex texts. Includes collaborative evaluations of the content, evidence, organizing principles and style of a variety of texts. Course encourages students to examine assumptions, implications and unintended consequences of rhetorical and content choices. Includes focus on primary sources and the interpretations of these documents in contemporaneous writing. Course expands and enhances the student's ability to write with fluency, effectiveness, and intellectual rigor.

Course Objectives

The student will be able to:

Reading:

1. Critically read, analyze, compare, and evaluate multicultural argumentative prose from across the curriculum.
2. Conduct rhetorical analysis of texts and identify a text's premises and assumptions in various social, historical, cultural, psychological, or aesthetic contexts.

Writing:

1. Demonstrate mastery in writing text-based arguments, including interpretation, evaluation, and analysis, and support them with a variety of appropriate textual evidence and examples.

2. Use and analyze basic modes of argument, such as inductive and deductive reasoning techniques, recognizing fallacies, analysis, interpretation, and synthesis.
3. Find, analyze, interpret, and evaluate research materials, incorporating them to support claims using appropriate documentation format without plagiarism.
4. Use style, diction, and tone appropriate to the academic community and the purpose of the specific writing task.
5. Apply theoretical models (such as sociological or historical theories) to a text.

Critical Thinking:

1. Identify logic of argument (premises and conclusions).
2. Demonstrate understanding of formal and informal fallacies in language and thought.
3. Employ meta-analysis to analyze and critique primary sources and their interpretations.

Course Content

Reading:

1. Read and analyze at least three book-length, college-level texts in separate or anthology form
  - a. Comprehend and evaluate a text's main themes
  - b. Draw reasoned inferences based on close reading of a text
2. Conduct rhetorical analysis of texts
  - a. Analyze varieties in voice, rhetorical style and purpose in non-fiction genres
  - b. Identify and analyze rhetorical devices in connection with a text's main themes
  - c. Establish cultural and historical contexts for a text and determine how those contexts shape that writing

Writing:

1. Demonstrate mastery in writing text-based arguments, including interpretation, evaluation, and analysis, and support them with a variety of appropriate textual evidence and examples
  - a. Based on writing a total of at least 8,000 words: Text-based compositions the shortest of which will be 1000 words, requiring analysis and meta-analysis of complex issues, textual ambiguity, and multiple perspectives
  - b. Practice writing both as a process of discovery and synthesis
  - c. Draw connections that synthesize:
    - i. Two or more texts
    - ii. The text(s) and the student's individual experiences and ideas
    - iii. The text and published critical responses to the text
2. Use and analyze basic modes of argument, such as inductive and deductive reasoning techniques, recognizing fallacies, analysis, interpretation, and synthesis
3. Find, analyze, interpret, and evaluate research materials, incorporating them to support claims using appropriate documentation format without plagiarism
4. Use style, diction, and tone appropriate to the academic community and the purpose of the specific writing task
  - a. Develop advanced grammar, punctuation, and syntax, including editing for improved sentence variety and flow

- b. Identify and employ the conventions and strategies appropriate to writing within various disciplines
5. Apply theoretical models (such as sociological or historical theories) to a text

Critical Thinking:

1. Identify logic of argument (premises and conclusions)
  - a. Distinguish denotation from connotation, the abstract from the concrete, and the literal from the inferential (including analogy, extended metaphor, and symbol)
  - b. Draw and assess inferences and recognize distinctions among assumptions, inferences, facts, and opinions
2. Demonstrate understanding of formal and informal fallacies in language and thought
  - a. Identify logic (premises/conclusions) and logical fallacies, such as syllogistic reasoning, abstractions, undefined terms, name-calling, false analogy, ad hominem, and ad populum arguments
  - b. Recognize and evaluate assumptions underlying an argument
3. Application of rhetorical theories and critical schools (gender studies, queer theory, psychoanalytic criticism, critical race theory, etc.)

Lab Content

Not applicable.

Special Facilities and/or Equipment

1. When taught on campus, no special facility or equipment needed.
2. When taught virtually, ongoing access to computer, internet, and email.

Method(s) of Evaluation

Methods of Evaluation may include but are not limited to the following:

Write a total of at least 8,000 words: a minimum of three untimed, formal essays (in-class or online) and two timed, informal essay exams (in-class or online)

Additional assignments may include:

1. Class discussion in small and large group formats
2. Oral presentations
3. Quizzes and tests
4. Journals and portfolios
5. Social justice/service learning projects
6. Production of the students' own creative work

Method(s) of Instruction

Methods of Instruction may include but are not limited to the following:

The instructor may deliver course material via lectures, discussions, and structured small-group exercises

When taught as a fully online course, the faculty shall employ one or more of the following methods of regular, timely, and effective student/faculty contact:

1. Private messages within the Course Management System
2. Personal email outside of the Course Management System
3. Telephone contact/weekly announcements in the Course Management System
4. Chat room within the Course Management System
5. Timely feedback and return of student work (tasks, tests, surveys, and discussions) in the Course Management System by methods clarified in the syllabus. Discussion forums with appropriate facilitation and/or substantive instructor participation

6. E-portfolios/blogs/wiki for sharing student works in progress; provide feedback from fellow students and faculty in a collaborative manner, and to demonstrate mastery, comprehension, application, and synthesis of a given set of concepts

7. Field trips

Representative Text(s) and Other Materials

One critical thinking text and at least three additional book-length college level texts of non-fiction literature presented either in separate or anthology form, to be supplemented at the instructor's discretion with additional readings, handbook, and/or rhetoric.
