Description

An introductory survey of the history of the American musical theatre genre. Includes roots in British music halls, Viennese operetta and African American jazz through the golden age of the musical and up to the contemporary Broadway stage. Emphasis will be placed on genres and styles, as well as the key composers, lyricists, librettists, directors, producers, designers, choreographers and performers. Examines how the musical mirrors contemporary social and political events.

Course Objectives

The student will be able to:

- identify various musical theatre styles; use this knowledge to extend and enrich music comprehension and enjoyment.
- apply knowledge of musical theatre style to identify various pieces of musical theatre by historical period, genre and literary source material.
- trace and describe the historical development of American musical theatre style in relation to the political, economic, social, religious developments and values of the time.
- compare and contrast repertoire of musicals through familiarity with a broad sampling of works, composers, styles and genres, and literary roots.
- think critically to analyze and critique good performance from bad from the perspectives of artistic quality and appropriate historical performance practice.

F. use this knowledge to deepen their appreciation of the ways in which music and theatre can be a powerful tool for communicating our common humanity within the diverse cultural, social and economic content studied.
